

FOOTLIGHT NOTES.

Hamlin's new theater will likely open on Saturday next.

"LeFouchambaults" is drawing well at Baldwin's, San Francisco.

"Pink Dominos" has reached its 450th performance at the London Criterion.

Cliff W. Taylor's new play of "Parted" is not favorably received in Philadelphia.

The Emma Leland combination left yesterday for Ottawa, Ill., where they open the season Sept. 2.

"The Two Mothers," which received its first presentation at the Boston Muesum last Monday, is said to be founded on the Tichbourne case.

John McCullough opens at Hooley's on the 9th, supported by Messrs. Fred B. Warde, H. Meredith, Miss Maud Granger, and Mrs. C. L. Davenport.

Newsy, one of the authors of "The Danicheffs," will have a new play produced at the Paris Ambigu next season. It is called L'Echeance.

The New Brighton is the name of a vaudeville theater opened last week on Broadway, New York, near Thirty-first street. Messrs. G. W. Warren & Co. are the proprietors and managers.

"A Celebrated Case," at the Brooklyn Park Theater, with Mr. J. W. Collier as Raoul, Mr. Edwin Varney as the Duke, Mr. E. K. Collier as Jean Renaud, Miss Emily Baker as Aricie and her maid, is personated by Bessie Turner.

Bronson Howard's "Hurricanes," lately seen in this city, opens the season at the New York Park to-night. The leading characters are taken by Mr. James Lewis, Mr. Frank Hardenbergh, Mrs. Gilbert, Mrs. Louise Allen, Miss Alicia Robson, Mrs. Agnes Booth, and Messrs. Sanger and Grismer.

It is said of Ada Cavendish that while not beautiful in person, she is attractively intellectual; has a clear, magnetic voice, and in her own quiet way will make a sensation. She does not depend on her success here for a fortune. She is the owner of the Olympic Theater, London, now leased to Henry Neville, and in receipt of a handsome income from this and other sources. She plays because she likes the excitement of the footlights.

An account of the death of Jennie Jackson, an actress, is published in the New Orleans Times. She is said to have been professionally known as Jennie Campbell, and formerly of Hooley's Theatre, of this city. She met with hard luck in several places, and finally turned up in New Orleans as a servant. The family she was living with became frightened at the yellow fever and came North, leaving the poor girl with only a dollar. She was soon after taken sick and died. She was tenderly cared for by strangers. Before her sickness she applied to her brother, a wealthy resident of Ford County, in this State, for aid, which was refused.

The full cast of the new drama by Gail Hamilton, entitled "An Open Verdict," with which the Standard Theater, New York, will be opened, is as follows: Neil Delafield, Eben Plympton; Godfrey Pope, Frank Evans; Isham Blodgett, Charles Le Clerq; Jarvis Talcott, Aug. Levick; Neilson Bundy, Ben Maginley; Dennis McGilliuddy, H. A. Weaver; Sheldon Parker, B. T. Ringgold; Judge of the Court, E. B. Leonard; Clerk, L. Weaver; Foreman of Jury, J. Hammond; Doorkeeper, R.
