"May Blossom; or Between Two Loves," is the title of the play which the original Madison Square Theatre Company will present at the Baldwin Theatre, Monday week. In this play the Madison Square Theatre has ventured into a stronger turn of dramatic material than it had been accustomed to. Unlike others of its plays, the dramatic work is entrusted to the leading actors. In the title role, Miss Cayvan has a part in which she displays with much - discretion the development of a charming womanhood. The first act represents the young girl free from care and in the first experience of a love affair — the late acts being touched with the pathos of womanly suffering and experience. "Mr. Joseph Wheelock enacts the leading role with strength and manliness, and Mr. Forest Robinson plays the lover with energy and force. Mr. Benj. Maginley and Mr. W. H. Crawford are new here, but their long performances of their roles will, with the others, guarantee a satisfactory rendering of the play whatever its merits may be.
